Knowing where we are going

We would think it foolish to set out on a journey without knowing where we were going. In a broad sense, our pilgrimage through life is largely a path into the unknown, a journey towards the destiny God sets for us. During this month of the Holy Souls, it is good to recall our faith in the resurrection of the body, and the Church's teaching about those who have gone before us and what kind of help we can hope to give them.

It is the Catholic tradition that for all those who die without fully repenting their sins, there is a purification in the next life. We also believe that the departed in Purgatory should be prayed for by those living, and especially through offering Mass on their behalf. The Curé of Ars, Saint John Vianney, when asked about the life hereafter said very simply, "I know nothing of tomorrow, except that the love of God will rise before the sun." Jesus promises at the Last Supper. "In my Father's house there are many rooms and I am going to prepare a place for you." While this offers us great hope it should not make us complacent, for we are daily challenged to choose between right and wrong, in order to follow the Lord of Life. Saint John Henry Newman described Purgatory as a healing process, preparing us for God's presence. But the Lord is there to heal that soul and draw us into heaven. This is what we pray for the Holy Souls in this month of November. Though nobody comes back to confirm it for us, through Jesus, we believe it is real, just the same. As Paul said: "Eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart to imagine what God has in store for those who love him."
